

Maori Studies

We meet twice a month at the Convenor's home in Milford. It is hoped that participants will be able to learn enough during a u3a year to speak and understand some very simple conversation; to also understand everyday Māori words now spoken by mainstream TV news readers, some everyday geographic names, and the basic differences between English and Māori grammar. Study of basic Māori tikanga (protocol & customs), and history will be included. The meetings will be a mix of discussion, presentations, and instruction.

This study group will, by its nature, involve some effort.
